Exiled Socialist Hailed in Lisbon, Talks to Spinola

LISBON. April 23.—Socialist leader Mario Soares today returned from four years in exile to a hero's welcome and a meeting with Gen. Antonio de Spinola, the head of the military junta which overthrew the regime of Premier Marcello Caetano in Thursday's coup. The two men, who had never met before, embraced at the cntrance to the Defense Ministry, then held a half-hour talk on the situation in the country. Mr. Soares said the talk was "cordial" and added: "I am even more optimistic than I was before." the military junta made it clear that it was not prepared to end the colonial war in African territories by granting them inde-pendence.

Gen. Spinola was showing signs of alarm at some of the activity of the left, which has been giving vent to feelings pent up by almost a half-century of dictatorship. He warned that he might be obliged to use force to prevent anarchy in the country.

On Friday, a mob sacked the offices of the rightist newspaper
Epoca and, on Friday night, young leftists paraded with banners calling for the end of capitalism and the colonial wars and sprayed revolutionary slogans on monuments and sidewalks. Military and police forces avoided a direct confrontation with the crowds by staying out of sight.

A longer-range confrontation was in prospect over African policy. Gen. Spinola's reference to self-determination involved his proposals to offer Portuguese Gui-nea, Mozambique and Angola equal status with Portugal in a federation. The peoples in the African areas would be allowed express their allegiance to this new Portuguese community through a referendum, but the general warned that the Africans were not yet ready for such a

Sadat Warns Israel to Quit Arabs' Lands

From Wire Dispatches

WASHINGTON, April 28. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said in an interview televised today that, if Israel refused to withdraw from occupied territories when the Middle East peace talks are resumed in Geneva, "this will mean war." However, Mr. Sadat said that he believes U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is "a man of miracles" and will succeed in disengaging Syrian and Israeli on the Golan Heights. Several times during a one-hour interview Mr. Sadat referred to Mr. Kissinger as "my friend," "Henry" and 25 a worker of "miracles."

Mr. Sadat said that, after disengagement had been achieved between Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan front, Egypt would be going to Geneva.

Questioned about Egypt's new ties with the United States and the cooling of its relations with the Soviet Union, President Sadat said he wanted to have what he called a balanced relationship with the two superpowers and was taking into account the fact that the United States had the best chance of achieving peace in the region.

He described his relations with Moscow as very strained because of his moves toward the United States. He attributed this to the sensitivity of the Soviet Union to Egypt's desire to realign its relations with the superpowers. Mr. Sadat said that until last November, apparently as a result of Russian aid to Egypt, "we had relation that was unbalanced. . Now, when I am trying to

A shift toward other suppliers, even if adequate material were available, would weaken Egypt's military posture when it is negotiating a territorial settlement with Israel, the sources added.

DUBLIN, April 28 (IHT).-Of all the Common Market countries, Ireland has the most to lose should Britain leave the European Economic Community-apart from Britain itself, that is, Although Irish government officials privately welcomed the return to power in February of the Labor party, London's abrasive attitude since then toward the EEC has caused deep anxieties here.

Unquestionably, Ireland has done extremely well out of its own 15-month membership, which has brought about a radical adjustment in its historic relationship with Britain that, in the words of Foreign Minister Garret Fitzgerald, has hitherto been based on "economic dependence and political neurosis."

Despite the fact that there was balance my relations, the Soviets tartif-free trade and free movement of labor between Britain

He has, of course, had the wind behind him. There has been no adverse public reaction here to EEC membership as Britain and, to a lesser degree, Denmark have experienced. Despite current complaints about the beef market and the lack of an EEC regional policy, there has been no serious questioning in Ireland of the principles of membership or those of the Treaty of Rome, Mr. Fitzgerald finds it ironic that his own country should have achieved, at last, such an open view on the world just at the time Britain seems to be going through painful isolationist spasms.

Nonetheless, Britain's surly at-titude toward the community represents a threat to Ireland. The main thrust of Irish foreign policy for the last 50 years has been to eliminate political and economic divisions between the republic and Northern Ireland. Sectarian differences apart, this has been largely achieved.

In the event of a British withdrawal from the EEC, tariff bar-riers would suddenly divide Ireland's North from the republic and Ireland from Britain. This would deal a heavy blow to the long-term ambitions for a united Ireland. The country, therefore, has a vital interest in Britain's continuing membership,

Mr. Fitzgerald does not like to dwell on this prospect. He feels that to talk about it too much is almost to will events to develop that way. And "a failure to produce tapes would, I think, legitimately give rise to adverse inferences as to any ambiguities that otherwise exist," he said. Mr. Richardson, interviewed on

Mr. Richardson replied: "I don't think that the evidence that we know about as newspaper readers, or television listeners, is cuite enough. Chapin, facing sentencing on May 15, contended that preju-dicial evidence had been introduced at his trial, that he was not granted a change in the trial site and that the jury had failed to follow the judge's instructions. The Whole Way

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said on a separate interview program that a compromise proposal to allow selected House Judiciary Committee members and staff to listen to the tapes would miss the mark. They might as well go the whole way," he declared. Sen. Javits said that, if the House impeaches Mr. Nixon, the President should step down from the presidency for the duration of his trial in the Senate.

"He should invoke the 25th Amendment," said Sen. Javits. "He can give up and recapture his power, simply by his own assertion. There's a precedent for that. Eisenhower did precisely that with Nixon, even before the 25th Amendment."

Along with spelling out the line of succession upon a president's death, the 25th Amendment provides that a president may upon written request of Congress, he temporarily replaced by the vicepresident when he "is unable to discharge the powers and duties" of his office. He can return to office with a similar ritten notice, although the issue would be left to a two-thirds vote of Congress if the vice-president and a majority of the cabinet disputed the return.

U.S. Study Doubts Shale Oil Will Be Major Energy Factor

By Morton Mintz

-An Atomic Energy Commuaion study ratios major coulds that the enermous U.S. shaleou reserves will ever make a auostantial contribution to domestic energy needs.

A reason is that the amount of water available in the 25.000square-mile shale-oil region of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming may limit the rate at which oil can be squeezed out of the rock-like mineral. AEC scientists sale in a draft report obtained by The Washington Post.

The scientists postulated an excase: making "all" the water in the region available for shale-oil development and none for other mineral industries, for Agriculture and perhaps for conversion of coal to gaseline.

Even so they said, the amount of shale oil that "possibly" could be produced would be only 3 miltion to 5 million barrels daily.

Feasible Level

As the AEC scientists see it. a feasible level of shale-oil production is only about i million berrels a day by 1982, or possibly sooner, if various problems are overcome. This level is roughly only 4 to 5 percent of the expected national need.

A level of I million barrels daily -a goal for 1930 of President Nuton's "project independence"may be attainable between 1981 and 1983, mainly if the government will undertake two demon-

Currently, the Interior Department is trying to achieve the "project independence" goal of 1 million barrels daily with a procram for leasing tracts. The program is unlikely to meet the goal. the report says. It cites estimates that, even with private holdings added, production will range "from a high of 300 000 bar-rels per day by 1980 to a low of 100,000 to 250,000 barrels per day by 1935."

The report, entitled "Government Role in an Oil Shale Dem-onstration Program," was dated Feb. 1 and has been turned over to the Federal Energy Office. The principal author is J.A. Blass of the AEC's Division of Applied Technology.

The report cited other obstacles. for example, disposal of shale and other soud wastes which presents ra serious environmental chal-

The report said that a substantial change in the present shale-oil leasing program was necessary to reach production of more than 100,000 to 250,000 barrels a day by the early 1980s. Nuclear Methods

Another issue is the use of nuclear explosives for underground processing, which has yet to be tested. Nuclear methods require much less water than others and eliminate the problem of disposing of spent shale.

However, the development and demonstration of nuclear technology "would require accepting the risk of some leakage of radioactivity (unto shale oil and into ground water] during the first few detonations," the report says.

Oilman Sues Mobil for $13 Billion In Case Involving Libyan Seizure

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 28 (UPI),—Texas oilman Nedson Bunker Hunt filed a $13-billion anti-trust suit against the Mobil Oil Corp. in a U.S. District Court Friday.

The suit charges that 12 other worldwide oil companies acted as co-conspirators but does not seek damages against

"I guess it would be one of the largest lawsuits in history." lavyer Philip Hirschkop of Alexandria said. "Certainly it is one of the largest against an oil company that we know of." Mr. Hirschhop said the suit stemmed from a Libyan oil producers agreement of 1971. Mr. Hunt held a half-interest in 11 billion barrels of reserve oil in Libya, he said but the holdings were nationalized in 1973. The lawyer said the suit charges that other firms were supposed to provide Mr. Hunt with oil so he could meet his commitments after he "was nationalized because he lived up to his agreement. Mr. Hunt's suit charges that Mobil was the first to reneze on the agreement.

Earthquake, Slides Strike In South Peru

43 Persons Killed: Two Villages Buried

LIMA, April 28 (AP).-Rescue workers are struggling to reach a large section of southern Peru that was struck by a strong earthquake and landslides on Thursday. Reports from the town of Huancuyo near the disaster area said that there had been 43 confirmed deaths.

The tremor and slides in the high Andes also buried two villages, blocked a river and destroyed a road. Ploods from a damned-up river submerged a third village.

The police said 24 of the dead were workers killed when a highway maintenance camp was burled.

The fate of 50 families in the submerged village of Pururo and 100 rural families was unknown. Peruvian television station quoted highway crewmen as saying the victims numbered about 200 in all, but that figure could not be confirmed. The tremor hit the mountainous province of Arequipa, 750 miles south of Lima. The landslides were 350 miles southeast of the capital. Persistent rains prevented helicopters from reaching the area of the slides, and overland rescue teams were blocked by mired roads and smaller mud-

River Blocked

In the area near Huancuyo, the slides quickly blocked the Mantaro River, forming a lake which started rising at the rate of more than three feet an hour. The police said that when last measured, the lake was about 10 miles long and about 150 feet deep.

First word of the slides was brought by American Larry Allen, general manager of Centromin-Peru, the government company that took over the U.S. Cerro Corp. properties when the state nationalized them in December. Mr. Allen, who was an executive with Cerro, spotted the disaster as he flew over the area

About Pressures on Russia

By Christopher S. Wren

The days have passed when anti-Communists in the West or in Eastern Europe itself could delude themselves into believing that defiance of Soviet begemony could succeed. The lessons of Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1963 are still fresh in mem-cernible in Romania, some dif-ferences in approach have been noted in Hungary and a certain amount of complaining about the Soviet Union can be heard almost anywhere in Eastern Europe, with the possible exception of Bulgaria. But, on the whole, the Warsaw Pact has rarely seemed as much at peace with itself as now. 'Socialist Commonwealth' In fact, Communists prefer not to refer to the pact directly at all these days, but speak instead of the "Socialist commonwealth." Some of the new feeling of relative international relaxation is ascribed directly to President Nison. In conversations with Communist officials at various levels, an impression is gained that he is regarded with something akin

Tapes Are Unique Archive on Soviet Scene

By Harrison E. Salisbury

NEW YORK (NYT).—American scholars will soon have available for intimate and detailed study more than 800,000 words of reminiscences recorded on tape by Nikita Khrushchev in the final years of his life.

The recordings are the material from which the two segments of Ehrushchev's published memoirs—the first issued in 1970 and the second volume about to be made public—have been

The tapes constitute a unique archive on the contemporary Soviet scene as viewed from within by one of the principal Krem-

Scholars believe they will prove invaluable in understanding the nature of the Soviet political process and in throwing great light-although often distorted by Khruschchev's effort to justify lumself—upon Soviet conduct in the last 30 years.

The authenticity of the basic materials has been established beyond any reasonable doubt. All of the tapes have been sub-jected to a complex voice-printing analysis in which more than 6.000 prints were matched against known samples of Khrush-

Extensive segments have also been heard by a group of Soviet specialists and scholars, some of whom were personally acquainted with Khrushchev. This study was carried out under the auspices of Columbia University, to whom the tapes have been given by Time, Inc.

The examination left no doubt in the minds of those familiar with Khrushchev that it was, indeed, he who was Roughly 300,000 words of the total dictated by Khrushchev had been incorporated in the two volumes prepared by Time.

The 300,000 unused words comprise a substantial segment on World War II (which was sharply abridged in Volume 1) and extensive materials on agriculture, housing, construction policy and Khrushchev's own early life.

The remainder of the nonpublished material is largely repetition on details not regarded as essential by Strobe Talbott. Time correspondent who edited the memoirs.

The tapes, which include many gaps, were dictated over a considerable period of time. The first recordings can be dated from internal evidence to late 1966 or early 1967, a little more than two years often them have some of the some o than two years after Khrushchev's fall from power. The last were distated only a few days before his death in 1971.

Precise dating of many segments is possible because Khrushchev often began recording by saying, for example: Today is April 27th. Now I will talk about the Beria affair." Khrushchev's mercurial temperament clearly comes through.

As he tells stories he becomes more and more excited and the bubbling personality he exhibited on his trips to the United States in 1959 and 1960 is much in evidence. At other times, he is obviously depressed. There is a break in the recordings of about four months' duration after Khrushchev's heart attack in late 1970. When he resumed dictation in the spring of 1971, he spoke of his heart attack and his voice seemed weak and old. But after a period he regained considerable vigor.

Khrushchev's purpose in making the recordings appeared to be to try to get the record of history straight to provide his own version of controversial events for future generations and to even some political scores.

Khrushchev-or those involved in getting the tapes to the West-set specific limitations on the kinds of material released. Great pains were taken not to violate the Soviet Official Secrets Act, for instance, in discussing military matters. Frequent gaps occur in Khrushchev's recollections about nuclear arms, in discussions of military aircraft and the like. Khrushchev apparently spoke fairly freely into the recorder. But sensitive material was later excised.

No light has been cast by Time, Inc., on the manner in which the Khrushchev material was obtained. However, the last batch of materials was received by Time nearly half a year after Khrushchev's death.

Atlantic Alliance Views

U.S., Europe and Russia

By Leonard Schapiro

ONDON.—One can speak of the United States and the Soviet Union as the two nuclear superpowers. But what of that vague entity Europe, of which, in geographical terms, much of the Soviet Union and the Soviet empire of people's democracies form a part? One can think of Europe in one sense as a group of states which share much of their history and tradition, and which, are linked to the United States by common ancestry and a democratic way of life. But what goes one then do about the awkward cases of Spain. Portugal and Greece, vital for the Atlantic defense system, but remote from democratic practice? Or about some of the waspishly neutral Scandinavian countries? The idea of Europe has always been an amalgam of contradictions. For our present purposes it might be best to confine ourselves to the European members of NATO and forget that two of them are not too convincing advocates for the defense of freedom that NATO stands for: There are, after all, still quite a number left. It is plain that economically, Europe can rival both the supernowers Militarity, for a long time to come, its defense will continue to depend ultimately on the nuclear might of the United States and on U.S. troops and conventional arms as well. One nould have to be very naive indeed, in view of what has happened in recent months, to believe that there is no longer any need for vicilant defense against the Source Union. The strategic arms limitation agreement has merely saved the Soviet Union vast copital which the United States could have inrested without crippling itself. while a comparable investment on the Soviet side would have crimpled the Soviet Union. The agreement has, in any case, been virtually nullified by rapid (and unforeseen; Soviet technological advances.

The louder the clamor for peace issuing from the Soviet side, the greater the preponderance which the Soviet Union has built on NATO's flank, while the ringing phrases on cooperation or peace have been worn rather thin by Soviet policy over the Middle East war, which the So riet Union made possible and which it now seems to be doing its best, with the old of newest client, Syria, to keep going as long as possible.

Question of Survival

In such a situation of danger. what is more essential for sur-ival of the "free world" than Nestern European unity and lose cooperation between Euope and the United States-u only to stop the Soviet Union rom exploiting U.S. isolationism nd anti-American feelings mong the European powers in order to weaken NATO. This brious policy, if the freedom of he Western powers is not to be ndangered, or entinguished, is ot going to come about over-

Title is another article of a the Soviet Union—unless it be the series published in the Inter- special arrangement that Polynational Herald Tribune on the problems and differences of Europe-U.S. relations. The series is being coordinated by Joseph Godson, who organized the Europe-American Conference in Amsterdam last year.

On the European side there is, probably as the product of wishful toinking and successful Communist propaganda, disbelief in the Soviet danger, in contrast to the situation which united Western Europe at the end of the forties. Then again there is a lack of confidence in the purity of U.S. intentions and a suspi cion (fostered by Soylet political) warlare, that the United States and the Soviet Union intend to settle the troubles of those tiresome smaller states between themselves.

There is also a not unjustified fear of American economic imperialism. And there is a strong sense in Western Europe that we. unlike the Americans, are immediately in the firing line and that if the Americans contribute. even disproportionately to the defense of that firing line, that is, after all, not a matter of the United States dollar Europe a kindness but of saving its own

There is equally genuine resentment on the U.S. side. The trauma left by Vietnam does not make it easy for Americans to live with the notion of their troops still serving overseas in what, all too readily, comes to be looked at as a foreign concern. There is force in the argument that if the United States bears so large a share of the military burden of MATO, it has a right to expect some economic benefits from its European partners-even if the petulant rudeness of President Nixon and Henry Kissinger was not calculated to make the argument more acceptable to Eu-

The famous doctrine of "containment" was perhaps pusitlanimous in the pre-nuclear Soviet era when "liberation" might have succeeded. But it is certainly vital for our safety now. This calls for a sense and imagination all around in rebuilding unity between Western Europe and the United States. If the Europeans must learn to work more closely with the United States, the U.S. government must learn to be more imaginative in its relations with the European powers

For example, it is futile to expeet that the European powers will necessarily and immediately fall into line with U.S. policy in the Middle East when these European powers are to an immensely greater degree dependent for economic survival for some time to come on Arab oil.

But if the Europeans must shed some illusions, so must the Americans. The fruits of the so-called "détente" policy should surely have taught the U.S. administration by now that it is erroneous to suppose that sweetness and light have descended on the Kremlin since Mr. Nixon's visit to Moscow: or that there is some special relationship that the United States can develop with phemus promised Odysseus, to be devoured last

First Principle

Above all, Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Nixon must really stop propagating the view that what they call "detente" is the only alternative to a nuclear conflagration. This is nonsense. All the experience of U.S.-Soviet relations of nuclear conflict is the cardinal principle of Soviet policy; it has nothing whatever to do with the complicated and ingenious exercise in political warfare which the Soviet leaders were clever enough to sell to the Americans under the label of "detente" 10 years after 1962

But there must also be considerable rethinking on both the American and European sides of the whole of their trading and financing policy toward the Soviet Union. Are they really wise. for example, to bolster the Soviet military effort by selling Russia the equivalent of three years' research and development, as one computer firm recently boasted it had done? The matter is complicated both in the United States and in Western Europe by the fact that much of Western trade with the Soviet Union is in private hands, as witness the U.S. grain deal. But the interests of private dealers are not necessarily the interests of the United States or Britain, hold their own against Soviet totalitarian foreign policy (which, course, includes trade; they will have to reconsider the degree of freedom which independent traders should be allowed. Above all, the Western powers should never forget to exploit their strengths against the Soviet Union. If the Soviet Union needs credits or technology as badly as it appears to then it should pay a political price for them. But such a policy can only be pursued successfully if there is unity of action between the United States and Europe and among the Western European powers, since in default of unity the Soviet Union will play one power off against the other. The Soviet leaders must learn that their "détente" gambit, with its potential economic prizes, must be paid for; and, above all, that vapid phrases about peace and friendship which are so dear to the Soviet leaders (and not entirely displeasing to Western statesmen anxious to improve their political reputations, are no substitute for real political changes and concessions. It is only if such changes take place that it will be possible to speak of détente in any real sense of the word. Meanwhile, in the words of Chairman Meo, the best advice for the United States and for Europe is: "When the for: is friendly, double the bolts on

If the Western powers are to

But Now Bores the Nation

Chaban Beats the Gaullist Drum

ANTES, France (WP) .-- It was a performance in the great Fifth Republic tradition starring Gauliist presidential candidate Jacques Chaban-Delmas summoning forth the apocalyptic vision anarchy and chaos sure to befall France unless his enemies on the right and left were defeated.

But, even as he finally managto warm up an audience of 6,000 Gaullist faithful Friday night, Mr. Chaban-Delmas must have known that only a miracle could prevent his undoing and that of the institutions which first Gen, de Gaulle, then Georges Pomoldou, had created and directed since 1958.

His handsome features drawn after a long day's barnstorming around western France, he slogged through a lackluster speech in which he avoided mentioning the latest in a series of increasingly disappointing public opinion polis. He had been told earlier that day that the latest poll, published Saturday by the news megazine Le Point, showed him trailing Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing by a seemingly irretrinvable 13 percentage points. The same polling firm only three days earlier had him trailing Mr. Giscard d'Estaing by three points-23 to 26 percent. But now he had slid to 18 percent, while his main adversary from what once was the ruling coalition was credited with 31 percent. With only a week to go before the first round of voting next Sunday, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing seemed destined to foce Socialist Francols Mitterrand in the May 19 runoff. That contest is restricted to the two leading first-round candidates, if no one in the storting field of 12 wins an outricht majority.

Equally damaging was the poll's message that Mr. Giscard d'Estaing was given a better chance winning the runoff against Mr. Mitterrand who, thanks to Communist and other leftist support, was credited with 42 percent of the first-round vote. France-

By Jonathan C. Randal ban-Delmas 19 points, but otherwise was identical.

Although Mr. Chaban-Delmas's long history as a sportsman and political animal have made him a die-hard competitor, his speech was almost a valedictory to 16 years of Gaullist rule which now shows undeniable signs of boring the nation.

He invoked the dead general's

'Political Earthquake'

He feared that a Mitterrand-Giscard d'Estaing runoff would be decided by only one or two percentage points, rule out any dialogue and touch off a "political earthquake which would make [the student-worker upheaval of] 1968 look like a joyous picnic outing."

The dire warnings about the dangers of such a left-right split constituted a departure from Mr. Chaban-Delmas's earlier tactics which had spared the finance minister in fevor of concentrating criticism against the "Socialist-Communist" candidate.

But he changed tactics in midveek when the polls showed that Mr. Giscard d'Estaing would beat him in the first-round vote. Hammering away at this apocalyptic danger, Mr. Chaban-Delmas insisted that such a close victory would divide France into "two hostile camps." He warned that "moderates" tempted to vote for Mr. Giscard d'Estaing should think twice and weigh "the deplorable effects" the victory of the "traditional right" would have

"for social peace." In a variation on Gen. de Gaulle's "the-Communists-or-us" scare tactics, he appealed for support to those leftist voters who feared for their 'private property and freedoms" under any government that included Communists.

He said he understood that leftists were tired and discontented and wanted change. But he Soir's latest poll gave Mr. Cha- said he was the way out of the "Communist trap" and that he wanted to continue to implement the changes he had begun when he launched his "New Society" reforms while President Pompidou's prime minister from 1969 to 1972. But Mr. Chaban-Delmas's preblem is that Mr. Pompidou fired him because the President thought that Gaullist voters basically were opposed to carrying out reforms which, they claimed, benefitted their political adversaries.

His present problems stem from the increasing identification of his campaign with such dic-hard narrow-gauged Gaullists as former Primo Ministers Maurice Couve de Murville and Michal Debré, Foreign Minister Michel Jobert and even former Culture Minister André Mairaux, Mr. Malraux emerged from a five-year. self-imposed political silence to back Mr. Chaban-Delmas on a television broadcast. Unfortunately for the candidate, the broadcast was almost completely un-

In obtaining Mr. Jobert's unenthusiastic and belated endorsement, Mr. Chaban-Delmas apparently sought to cash in on the foreign minister's outspoken opposition to U.S. and Soviet superpower dictation. Mr. Jobert's brand of anti-

Americanism received the backing of 63 percent of Frenchmen polled in an early April sounding and Mr. Chaban-Delmas drew warm applause in saying that French policy should be made "in Paris-not in Washington or Mos-

He said he was diametrically opposed to the "Atlanticism"-or pro-Americanism-he detected in Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's foreign policy now that centrist opposition leader Joan Lecanuet had rallied to the finance minister's bandwagon,

They come from their quarters in the poorest sections of the city and surrounding areas, where three or four often soure the rentar of a room, to spend their day oif the best way they know how in a land that buys their labor and pays for it at a fair rate but provides little when the factories and construction sites are closed.

Toe Frankfurt station-or any major railroad station in West Germany any Sunday-illustrates the nature and scope of a large question posed, mainly stiently. by the unprecedented migration or approximately seven militon workers, and some of their families as well from the agricultural countries of southeastern Europe. The cafeteria-waiting room becomes the village coffee house. The few clusters of stand-up tables at which the city's famous sausages are eaten and beer drank turn into bars and restaurants. The newsstands selling foreign newspapers and the tobacco and candy stores take the place of village shops. No one shops at the flower kiosks.

Hall Is a Street

From morning into late evening the whole long hall is a street which men swarthier than most Germans and darker of hair meet, stand, drink, talk, shout, laugh and often pound each other on the back. German travelers walk by without friendship, hostility or interest.

It is a village almost entirely of men, because those who have their wives are not so lonely. And women workers pass their Sundays seeking a bit of privacy with their men friends or doing personal tasks that men avoid.

The predominance of Yugoslavs and Turks is explained by their great number in Germany-about 500,000 from each country among the 2.5 million foreign workers

Besides, workers said, many arrive at the station on suburban trains, find friends and compatriots there and see no reason to go more deeply into a city that remains foreign to them. They stay until the last train.

Nostalgia for Home

"They don't say so " a woman working in the Christian Mission office said of the foreign workers. "but the nostalgia for home evoked by the coming and going of trains is also a big reason that brings them here in such crowds." By midday, when most of the

Occasional Brawls

As the afternoon wears on, the crowds get denser and the discussion louder, especially among the drinking Yugoslavs. The national differences among the constituent Yugoslav republics are even more heatedly discussed abroad than at home,

The station police sergeant says that brawls among the drinkers are not infrequent, but fights between Germans and foreign workers in the station are "not more frequent than outside." The sergeant says that, every now and then when too many passengers complain about not being able to get to the trains because of the Sunday visitors. policemen pass out printed leaflets that say in German, Italian, Spanish, Greek, Serbo-Croat and

But Shubedo figures that up is the only place to go. Coping with frustrations of supply and capital formation in one of the world's 25 poorest countries has taught self-reliance. Marifu, once in the poultry business in Kansas City, has added expertise. There's talks of expansion and of opening a school for children of Tanzanian workers on the farm.

Simply surviving as a link be-tween black Americans and Africa has brought a kind of success. About 650 black Americans visited the farm in six months last year. Some, planning to live in Tanzania, use the farm as a half-way hostel until they find their own jobs and housing.

Bang, Whimpers—and Cheers

A generation of gray and unspectacular "political" solution for that war will doubtauthoritarianism has ended in Portugal, to popular cheers and dancing in the streets. And of course there is deep pondering on what the military coup will mean for Portugal itself, as new blood starts flowing through political veins, stiff and shrunken with disuse, what the Portuguese example will mean for similar regimes—especially in neighboring Spain: what hope Gen de Spinola's triumph holds out for the colonies in Africa. And there are no clear or easy answers to any of thest questions.

There is almost no doubt that the intentions of the military leaders of Portugal are good, in terms of human liberty. All their pronouncements, all their early actions, are consistent with the assumption that in this case the armed forces have shattered an ossified civilian system of political control. What remains to be seen is which stable democratic institutions can be erected in the place of the fallen government; how released tensions can be guided into constructive channels: whether, as Gen. de Spinola has warned, he may have to use force to avert anarchy.

And on the aftermath of the coup much of the force of the Portuguese example will depend—and that force will be limited, in any case, by the peculiarities of the Partuguese case. For there can be little doubt that the political structure erected by Mr. Salazar, which survived the strains of the Spanish civil war and the even greater stresses of World War II and the disruption that followed them, fell under the prolonged wastage of a colonial war. And the degree to which Gen. de Spinola can substitute his less determine the success of his revolution.

The political settlement the general has in mind is far from obvious. The French union which the Fourth Republic sought to substitute for older forms of coloniclism was not enough, and the Fifth Republic came into being to grant independence to almost all the colonies. That Fifth Republic owed its existence, in very large part, to failures in Indochina and persistent warfare in Algeria -to much the same conditions that Gen. de Spinola denounced in the book that cost him his command and brought him into power.

Thus the chief moral, and the chief problem, of the Portuguese revolt, stems from colonialism. There is a certain historical irony in the fact that it was Portugal that led the way, half a millennium ago, in the vast expansion of Europe and European ways that was to make the world we know today. and that it is Portugal which is the last of the European countries to confront, at home, the revulsion against that expansion which characterizes our modern era.

The old colonialism has been dying with a succession of bangs and whimpers; both are now being obscured by the sounds emerging from the emerging nations-which are finding that independence does not in Itself insure either prosperity or individual freedom. The big bang in Lisbon, by the same token, does not imply that Portugal's problems either in the Iberian peninsula or in Africa have been solved. But at least there is the hope that realism will succeed political dogmatism, that popular will can find true expression. And that goes far to justify the flowers, the songs and the cheers in Por-

Reward of Peace

The challenge to would-be peacemakers for the Middle East has long been one of making all sides see that they have more to gain through reaching a settlement than through military means. The moment is ripe for the United States to make a new case for this fundamental point; that is precisely the goal of President Nixon's 1975 foreign aid message.

Included for the first time since 1956 is substantial economic aid for Egypt, to the entent of $250 million. Another $207.5 million would continue the ongoing aid relationship with Tordan, and a special fund of $100 million would be available for Syrian or Palestinian aid if the evolving diplomacy so justified. Israel would receive credits and sorely needed economic support of $350 million beyond the emergency fund of $2.2 billien granted last autumn.

In the case of Egypt, the salient point is not the amount of aid but the fact that improved relations make it possible at all. The particular uses to which the money would be put are constructive, not controversial. Soecifically, these involve clearing the Suez Canal, buying farm and industrial goods and rebuilding the canal-side Egyptian cities ravaged during the late President Nasser's ill-conceived war of attrition. There is no provision for military support or arms

The projects are precisely those which outside analysts long anticipated as signals of a desire by Cairo to shift away from the ruinous military option toward a search for peaceful coexistence. Even inside Israel, officials have repeatedly stated that reopening the canal and rebuilding the major cities -Port Said, Qantara, Ismallia and Suezcould be the most effective disincentive to resumption of warfare.

The Aswan dam symbolized the years of Soviet influence in Egypt: now the revived and reconstructed canal cities could become monuments to United States support in the cause of Arab-Israeli peace. As Egypt's oil producing allies accumulate ever more reserves. Cairo's future dollar demands upon the United States will not be great; what is important now is to give President Sadat an immediate tangible sign of American support in the risky political course he has

Other elements in the President's $5.13billion foreign aid package deserve more skeptical scrutiny. The economic aid to Israel is considerably less than had been requested, and both Congress and the executive branch would do well to stay flexible in meeting America's long-standing interest in preserving Israel's economic and military strength. Unlike the Arabs, Israel has no other major source of investment and economic aid.

Far harder to justify will be the administration's proposed aid for Indochina-particularly $750 million for South Vietnam. more than double the present level, on top of the $1.4 billion in military aid already included in the Pentagon budget.

Foreign aid as an institution has fallen on hard times in Congress and the country. If some of the programs and policies of past years have been discredited in practice, the underlying task of dividing the wealth and productive capacity of the world most equitably among its peoples has scarcely begun.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Dangerous Trifles

It could have been boredom more than any ness as an instrument for peace in the meaningful policy change that red U.S. representatives last week to accept a shabby and one-sided United Nations Security Council resolution condemning Israel in strident terms but dancing away from any similarly explicit condemnation of wanton Arab terrorists. The resolution is empty anyway, the Washington reasoning apparently went, so it was hardly worth lighting over. Such cynicism merely debases further UN useful-

Middle East.

Resolutions of the type passed Wednesday night admittedly contribute nothing to the serious diplomacy under way aimed at an Arab-Israeli settlement. The danger in what looks like an American cave-in, after years of abstaining from similarly unbalanced UN declarations, is that Israel will sense deepening isolation-not an auspicious condition for responsible negotiations.

Lisbon Putsch

Centurions once again have taken arms in a serious national crisis to dismiss helpless or impotent politicians. #### The World vs. the Tyranny of History

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-One of the perversities of history is that it refuses to adjust itself to the convenience of men or nations. It keeps asking the most critical questions at the most awkward times. It ought to know that President Nixon is preoccupied with Watergate and that everywhere there is now political disruption and a longing for quiet to sort things out, but it will not wait for a new political order.

In fact, the next three years are likely to be decisive on four fundamental questions: Whether there will be peace

1. Whether there was or war between the Soviet Union and China. 2 Whether the race in strategic arms-particularly multiple nuclear warheads on intercontinental missiles—will get beyond Whether there will be a new order or war in the Middle

The danger of war between Moscow and Peking is not a Suuday supplement nightmare. Nothing troubles Secretary of State Henry Kissinger more than this question, and presumably he has more reasons than anybody else here for worrying about it.

Danger Now

But right now is the dangerous time-not three years from now. By then China will have an offensive nuclear arsenal of its own. which the Soviet Union could not attack without risking nuclear retaliation by the Chinese.

By then, too, presumably political power in China will have passed from the older generation of Mac Tse-tung and Chou Enist to the not-so-old military and political leaders coming along. Anyway, China will be less vulnerable to attack by the end This same time frame applies SUEZ, Egypt.—The dazzling success of U.S.-Egyptian policy during the past six months exposes Washington and its new friend, President Anwar Sadat, to popular disillusionment in this part of the world and to Soviet retribution unless diplomatic achievements are rapidly followed up by economic support.

Yet there is no guarantee that enough of this will be coming. As has been carefully explained to Cairo, the U.S. Congress has entered a period of shrinking in terest in all aspects of foreign aid. Moreover, it is obsessed with the sordid Watergate drama. The mere fact that Sadat takes no pains to hide his admiration for President Nixon does not wildly endear him to an American legislative majority.

Cautious Pledges

To all this must be added the latter's heritage of sympathy with and support for Israel and the certainty that Congress has no intention of helping Egypt if it is at the cost of commitments to the Jewish state. Nor is Sadat well known in America; his advertised admiration for Secretary of State Kissinger has not brought him

Egypt this week, is keenly aware of these factors and has taken pains never to pledge more to Sadat than he was confident he could deliver. For the rest, where he saw eye-to-eye with Egypt, he merely promised to try and get congressional endorsement,

This makes future realities hard to assess. There is already a food shortage in Egypt and the economy falters. There is an urgent need for building materials. And Sadat has taken the gamble of publicly promising to reduce military reliance on Soviet weapons. That ultimately means he will have to purchase considerable equipment from the U.S.A. Where will the money come from? I talked here with Osman Ahmed Osman, minister of reconstruction. He is in charge of a program he reckons will cost $10 billion over a five-year period to put the ruined cities along the canal and in the Sinai Peninsula back on their feet while developing a new agricultural and industrial infrastructure.

have to raise even more than the reconstruction fund Osman envisions in order to rebuild its armed forces on a non-Soviet basis.

Osman, a man of great energy and self-confidence, doesn't seem fazed by this Augean task. He says his program is postulated on raising the needed financing from three equal contributions: Egypt, friendly Arab states, and from foreign capital. In the last category he mentioned America, West Greece, Sweden.

The minister says foreign groups are clamoring to invest in his projected five consortiums because they know there are large potential profits here based cheap labor supplies and guaranteed investments. He claims he has already assembled about $500 million to begin the fiveyear reconstruction.

The United States, as a government, evidently thinks on a much smaller scale. The $250 million requested of Congress by Nixon represents only the urgently needed amount for initial loan and credit pledges to Egypt. But this, it is emphasized, is absolutely essential and the words "urgently" and "initial" are underscored, Will Congress pass the necessary enabling bills?

In the long run, of course, the sum required if Uncle Sam is to help Egypt to its feet is immensely greater than anything the administration is likely even to whisper these days. But, if the price of diplomatic victory in this area is vast, so is the political and strategic implication of that victory.

Moreover, if America and the friends it can rally should in the end fail to produce the goods, the result will be disaster Sadat, a probable new Arab-Israeli war, resurgence of Russian influence in the Arab world with all its oll, and a return of Soviet naval ascendency to the east Mediterranean. How much is it worth to the American people to

The question should be presented to them in precisely such terms with no effort to gloss over realities. Boiled to its essence, it can be stated as: What is the probable cost of peace in this area, a peace in which U.S. interests (and incidentally Israel's) may be expected to flourish? And

-Another classic confrontation may be erupting between Congress and an innumbent administration over national economic policies in this era of high inflation and increasing unemployment-or it may all turn out to be no more than political maneuvering keyed to the November elections.

The notential clash, which has been simmering for some months with the growth of public furore over the intolerable level of prices, burst into the open last week when a large number of Senate Democrats indicated that they favored a last-minute reprieve for some form of the economic-controls program, scheduled to expire completely tomorrow. At the same time, more vocal support for a tax reduction was forthcoming from some legislators.

Both proposals seem nighty inadvisable in the present aimosphere and probably are doomed to defeat, although anything can happen when tensions run as high as they are now over the un-releating upward march of prices. For various reasons, wage-price controls have not been working especially since the shift to Phase-3 in January, 1973, and ought to be scuttled so that the free market can operate again without the restrictive harness that has emecarbated supply probleas—one of the roots of the present horrendous double-digit inflation trend.

Wrong Medicine

The proposal for a tax cut should also be consigned quickly to the inactive file because it is precisely the wrong medicine for an inflation-ridden economy at this time. It would only serve to intensify the inflation problem without according any real beneices public.

While a tax cut may seem enticing on humane grounds to provide financial relief chiefly for the low-income group, it would really be a cruel illusion. It would tend to create bigger deficits in the federal budget than now envisaged and reinforce the inflationary pressures in the economy that take so much out of everyone's pocketbook. Even if a unx reduction were appropriate, it probably would be some time before it could wend

THE DREYFUS OFFSHORE TRUST N. V.

THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE DREYFUS OFFSHORE TRUST N.V. HAVE APPROVED THE TRANSFER OF SUBSTANTIALLY ALL OFFSHORE'S ASSETS TO THE DREYFUS INTERCONTINENTAL INVESTMENT FUND N.V. OFFSHORE'S SHAREHOLDERS MAY, WITHOUT FURTHER ACTION OR A SALES CHARGE OR OTHER COST, CONTINUE THEIR INVESTMENTS THROUGH INTERCONTINENTAL, A MUTUAL FUND WHOSE SHARES ARE FREELY REDEEMABLE AT NET ASSET VALUE AT ANY TIME. OFFSHORE'S SHAREHOLDERS MAY ALSO REDEEM THEIR SHARES AS DESCRIBED BELOW.

The Dreyfus Offshore Trust N.V. ("Offshore") is pleased to announce that on April 1st, 1974, Offshore's Shareholders voted to approve the transfer of substantially all the assets of Offshore to The Dreyfus Intercontinental Investment Fund N.V. ("Intercontinental") in exchange for shares of Common Stock of Intercontinental, at adjusted net asset value. It is anticipated that the transfer will take place on July 16th, 1974, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and that after the completion of appropriate proceedings under Netherlands Antilles law—which are expected to be completed on September 16th, 1974—the Intercontinental Shares received by Offshore will be credited to Offshore Shareholders on a pro rata basis. Promptly after the transfer on July 16th, Offshore will publish an announcement stating the number of Intercontinental Shares received in exchange for the assets of Offshore transferred to Intercontinental, and promptly after the Intercontinental Shares are credited to Offshore's Shareholders, Offshore will publish the number of Intercontinental Shares credited to Offshore school and outstanding Offshore Share.

Offshore's Shareholders may continue their investments through Intercontinental, the shares of which are redeemable at net asset value without any charge for redemption or may redeem their Offshore Shares for cash beginning on July 16th, 1974. Under Offshore's Articles of Incorporation, Shareholders who desire to redeem Offshore Shares before September 16th, 1974, must give Offshore sixty days' advance notice. For example, Shareholders desiring to redeem Offshore Shares on July 16th, 1974, must deliver a notice of redemption on or before May 17th, 1974, to Offshore or one of its redemption agents, First National City Trust Company (Bahamas) Limited, Thompson Boulevard, P.O. Box N-1576, Nassau, N.P., Bahama Islands, or Banque Internationale à Luxembourg, 2, Boulevard Royal, Luxembourg - Ville, Luxembourg. Similarly, Shareholders desiring to redeem Offshore Shares on September 16th, 1974, must deliver a notice of redemption to Offshore or one of its redemption agents on or before July 16th, 1974.

After September 18th, 1974, when the Intercontinental Shares received by Offshore are credited to Offshore's Shareholders, the certificates evidencing Offshore Shares will be treated for all purposes as certificates for the credited Intercontinental Shares, and Offshore's Shareholders will become Intercontinental Shareholders entitled to all rights of Shareholders under Intercontinental's Articles of Incorporation, including the right to redeem shares, to receive dividends and to vote at shareholders' meetings. Offshore's Shareholders will not be required to exchange their share certificates for new certificates of Intercontinental unless they wish to receive dividends in cash. Until the Offshore cartificates are exchanged for Intercontinental certificates, Intercontinental dividends payable on unexchanged certificates will be used to acquire additional Intercontinental Shares at net asset value without any sales charge. Offshore's Shareholders may redeem the Intercontinental Shares credited to them at any time at the net asset value per share determined on the date Intercontinental's assets are valued next following the date on which the Offshore certificates are presented for redemption in accordance with Intercontinental's redemption procedures.

Intercontinental is a diversified open-end investment company organized under the laws of the Netherlands Antilles and is engaged in the continuous offer and redemption of its Shares. Intercontinental's Shares are listed on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange, and notices of distribution of Intercontinental's Shares in Germany and in Switzerland have been filed with the Bundesaufsichtsamt für das Kreditwesen in Berlin and the Bankenkommission in Berne, respectively.

Questions and requests for further information about Intercontinental should be forwarded to:

Dreyfus Management International GmbH ("DMI"), Maximilianstrasse 21.

8 Munich 22, Germany. Telephone: (089) 220702; telex: 5/29392.

DMI is sponsored by The Dreyfus Corporation, New York, New York, which is investment adviser to mutual funds having approximately $1.95 billion in assets.

Offshore's Shareholders also voted to approve the Balance Sheet and Summary of Operations of Offshore for the fiscal year ended July 15th, 1973.

Congress Fight Seen on Inflation Policy

(Continued From Page 9) by lower production, higher costs and the biggest decline in worker productivity during the first quarter of this year since 1947, desperately needs to avoid further cost-push pressures.

The Fed. of course, has a paracularly difficult role to fill. It must keep money tight but not be so terribly restrictive that it pushes interest rates significantly higher and thus aborts the economic recovery that most economists are anticipating for the second half of this year.

It was certainly clear last week that the Fed intends to be tough. Arthur Burns, its chairman, indicated an iron-willed determination to come to grips with the inflation problem at a news conference last Monday. Then the Federal Reserve Bank let it be known that it will roll over its bill at the average price that the market itself sets instead of actively submitting its bids Then, on Wednesday, it pushed the discount rate up one half of next one beginning July 1. The a point to a record high of percent.

Those three developments attest to the Fed's willingness to take still-higher interest rates in the effort to dampen inflation. Meanwhile, the prime bank rates and other interest rates have been rising to new peaks, too, How much further will they all 20? And how long will the Fed tolerate rising rates and run the risk of so much turmoil m the linancial markets, housing and industry in general?

The Fed's role must be accompanied-and helped-by restraint on spending by the government. Although the Nixon administration remains confident that the lederal budget deficit in the year ending June 30 will be held down close to the $4.66 billion estimated earlier, some other analysis are skeptical. believe the red ink will turn out to be somewhat greater in the predicted deficit for the 1975 fiscal year had been $9.4 billion.

After the first nine months of the current fiscal year, the Treasury's deficit stood at more than $13 billion, but officials are hopeful that tax collections this month and in June will lower the deficit closer to the original estimate. That could turn out to be excessively optimistic if the economy does not soon develop considerably more bounce.

Should a tax reduction be voted any time during the next 14 months, the budget situation could be changed considerably producing a bigger deficit and injecting additional stimulus into the economy.

The present frightening and ominously threatening inflation course must be changed promptly and resolutely, lest it lead to tragic consequences. And that can only be accomplished through unrelaxed discipline on spending and monetary matters in Congress, within the administration and at the Federal Reserve. The nation can ill afford political solutions to its buge economic Home Despite the restrictions imposed by the rent freeze, the 1973 rental income increased and the demand for factories and warehouses on all nine estates has continued at a very high level. During the year the company acquired a total of 38 acres for development at Aberdeen, Chester and Weston-super-Mare.

Overseas Renials have been further increased during the year and now amount to 25% of the group's total. The Canadian company has been the star performer with a 44% increase in pre-tax profits to $1,052,000. Two sites totalling 40 acres were acquired in Chicago and the company plans to have 250,000 sq it of industrial space ready to let by this coming October.

Future The Board anticipates that despite current difficulties, the 1973 profit level will be at least maintained in the current year.

During the year the Group acquired a total of 100 acres for industrial development at home and overseas and £54 million has been allocated to the development programme. 1973 Annual Reports now available from The Secretary.

Drake Relays

DES MOINES, lova, April 28 'UPI'. - University of Hilmon freshmen Charlton Ehizuelen, a native of Nigeria, uncorked the nations best triple jump of the season yesterday to capture a title at the 65th annual Drake Reia 3.

Enimielen's leap was 55214, usariy a foot and a half better than the old Drake more of 50-7 by Barry McClure of Micools Tennessee State last year. The slender Enizueien had earlier won the Big-Ten mooor triple jump.

door meet. But his effort at Drake was a career best.

Mike Boit, a native of Kenya The ras second to Rich Wonluter in a special 880 Friday, ran a strong anchor mile of 4:029 to lead Eastern New Mexico to a victory in the college distance

Jipcho First In Pro Track Mile Classic

EL PASO, Texas, April 28 (UPI).-Kenjan Ben Jipeno outran Dave Wottle and Chuck Labenz over the last 300 yards yesterday in the mule run of the El Paso Pro Track Classic to finish in 4:02 3. Jim Ryun dropped out after two laps.

Ryun has been expected to make it a tough race, but he suffered a slight leg injury, slowed and stepped off the track as Jipcho began to pick up the pace at the half-mue point. Fred Williamson, Boo Searren and Steve Smith continued their assault on a world pole vault record late in the day amid increasing winds. All early sur-passed the 18-foot mark. The record set in 1972 at El Paso in 18-5 I 2.

Jipono and the other two pulled away from the field after the three-quarter mark and Woule challenged from third as they entered the sprint.

John Carlos swept the 190 and 220-vard dashes to earn the most outstanding performer award. Carlos won the 100 in 9.3 and returned to notch the best mark in the world this year with a 20.4

HITLER

By Joachim C. Fest. Translated from German by Richard and Clara Winston. A Helen and Kurt Wolff Book. Harcourt Brace Joranovich. 844 pp. Illustrated. $15.

Reviewed by Otto Friedrich

THE efforts to explain who Hitler was have ranged from the passionate denunciations of his ideological enemies (Bertolt Brecht, for example) to the somewhat cooler accounts of journalists (William Shirer) and scholars Alan Bullock) to the speculations of distant psychologists Walter C. Langer), who suggest dark connections between Hitler's sexual disturbances and the politics of evil. After half a century, it might seem that there is little new to be said, but the gargan-tuan success of Albert Speer's "Inside the Third Reich" apparently started yet another scramble smong the collectors and publishers of Nazi memorabilia.

This spring brings us Joachim C. Pest's "Hitler," which is, among other things, the longest and most comprehensive of all the Hitler biographies. It is also the most successful, with sales reported at 500,000 copies in Germany and 200.000 in France.

Fest's credentials are good. He is a professional journalist intelligent. scrupulous, fair-minded. Now 48, he is an editor of the distinguished Prankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung. Like any competent and con-scientious journalist. Fest tries to provide a reasonably objective account. He does not seem to have unearthed any important new documents, or to have interviewed many major survivors of the Third Reich (except for Speer, whose memoirs he helped to com-pile), but he has dug deeply into the mountains of evidence, and he has carefully weighed the significance of all the testimony.

His prose, as reproduced in this translation, ranges from the pedestrian to the opaque. But his most remarkable failure as a journalist is that he treats almost every dramatic climax in his story as something to be evaded, circled around, or backed into.

The final result of this careful, sensible approach is, unfortunately, that Fest doesn't really tell us very much that we didn't already know—and that in telling us what we do know, he manages to make it all rather leaden.

Then why the great success? One of the oddities of the Hitler books now coming from Germany is the relatively small share devoted to World War II, and to the atrocities that it engendered Fest reaches page 625 before the war gets under way, leaving only about 100 pages for such with as Dunkirk. Stalingrad and Auschwitz. This difference in emphasis suggests that the Hitler we keep trying to exorcise varies widely, even among men of goodwill, from one country to another.
There are two basic questions that every inquiry tries to answer: (1) how did an obscure and semiliterate Austrian demagogue become the constitutionally chosen ruler of Germany and (2) hor did this ruler lead a supposedly civilized people into war barba-rism and destruction? Outside of Germany, the interest in the first question is rather limited.

Thus. Fest devotes most of his labors to leading us through the labyrinths of German politics of the 1920s.

He tells us, too, of Hitler's often underestimated tactical skills, his ability to change direction and to play off one enemy against another, and his passionate rheteric -some of which sounds today strangely like the rallying and uplifting speeches of Charles de Gaulle or John Kennedy. Yet as late as 1939, the Nazis were nothing—they held 12 seats in a Reichstag of some 500 members A year later, the economy had collapsed, the unemployed num-bered in the millions, and the Nazis won their first stunning election victory. And once Hitler had gained power, he did create jobs, build highways, and even preside over victory in the Olympics. All of which leads Fest to the conclusion that "if Hitler had succumbed to an assassination or an accident at the end of 1936, few would hesitate to call him one of the greatest of German statesmen, the consummator of Germany's history."

Perhaps. Perhaps. after a scrutiny of all the documents this is the sensible view. Perhaps it is the view that sensible Germans have long been waiting to hearthat they too were victims of the tragedy. Yet the enigma of Hitler remains, and what remains most enigmatic is not really the question of who he was, and why he became the leader of Genmany, but rather who the Gumans are, and why they were too

In world championship candidates competition, in which small differences separate the players, it is not strictly cor-rect to speak of upsets, but Viktor Korchnoi's victory over Tigran Petrosian in the first game of their semifinals match in Odessa was a case of the underdog felling the favorite.

While Korchnoi has been numbered in the ranks of the world's best for 15 years, he has never succeeded in becoming challenger. In the last cycle, he was knocked out in the semifinals by Petrosian and, in 1968, Boris Spassky eliminated him in the finals. Korchnoi's hard-hitting tactical style is better suited to tournament than to match play, which requires steadiness and avoidance of unnecessary risk. Moreover, the precise calculation of innumerable variations that Korchnoi habitually indulges in is exhausting and conducive of errors.

Bad Days, Good Days

Perhaps that is why he is the most erratic of the top grandmasters. Before his great triumph in sharing first prize in the Leningrad International, he finished ignominiously out of the money in the Leningrad City Championship, losing game after game to far lesser lights. Korchnoi did indeed win his quarter-finals match with Henrique Mecking in Augus-ta, Ga., but his play was so rocky that one cannot avoid the conclusion that Mecking really beat himself.

However, his play in the first game with Petrosian was beyond criticism. When Petrosian took a step to fianchetto his queen bishop (3... P-QN3), Korchnol at once set his center pawns on white squares (4 P-K4 and 5 P-Q3), denying that bishop activity. By overprotecting his KP with 10 R-K1, Korchnoi threatened a powerful advance with 11 P-Q4, thus forcing Petrosian to make

Some Wine Wisdom

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK -- Many readers have urged me to divulge my wisdom about wine, and I do so Sladly, for wine is a noble thing, being much slower than the mertini known in bibulous circles as the quick blow to the back of the head and much harder than differential calculus.

The most common wines are Chablis (rhymes with "woodly") and Beaujolais

(bo - joe - lay). These are excellent wines for beginners because they are easy to pronounce. Neither should be drunk, of course. unless the label bears the words "appellation controlee" (meaning "apples under control") and "mis au domaine," which means "put at the domain." These phrases are the buyer's guarantee that the wine has been made from grapes, with no apples mixed in, and sent to a good domain to acquire breeding, bouquet, good nose, smooth finish and skill at equitation.

Bottles whose labels bear these phrases are, unfortunately, so expensive that no one can afford to drink them except on a 25th anniversary, and since neither wine will keep for 25 years there is really no point in buying either, especially since, if you are right up on top of a 25th anniversary you would probably rather have three martinis and go to sleep.

Some labels will bear the words "mis en bouteilles dans nos caves." which means "bottled in our caves." This wine is made from fermented moss and must always be served at cave temperature.

In ordering wine at a restaurant, a knowledgeable banter with the wine waiter helps establish one's savoir-faire. To avoid humiliation at the outset, the best wine to order is Châteauneuf-du-Pape. since it is relatively easy to pronotince (shot-on-nuf-dew-pop).

An authoritative question or two creates a forceful impression. "This shot-oh-nuf-dew-pop." You might say, "has it been put at the domain?" Or, "Whose caves was it bottled in?"

When the waiter hands you the cork, pass it to your dinner partner and ask him, or her, to squeeze it, then return it to the waiter and ask him to have it chopped very fine and put in the salad. In tasting the wine, roll a small quantity across the palate, then let it settle in the bottom of the mouth and gargle a quantity of air across it and into the lungs, while making loud snoring sounds. Tell the waiter to taste some after objecting that, in this particular wine, the apples have not been very well controlled.

Having mastered French wines, drinkers will find German wine even more expensive. This is because there is so little of it. The persistent story that Hermann Goering drank it all after the collapse of the Russian front is probably a canard, but it has gone someplace and will not come back for less than $40 or $50 a bottle. It goes beautifully with red cabbage and a Swiss bank account.

For value, the best buys are California and New York wines, but many uninformed sophisticates view them with contempt because they can understand the labels. I have solved this problem with a supply of empty French wine bottles and a funnel Now my California cabernet always comes to the table as a "premier cru" ("first crew") from Bordeaux.

In the East, unfortunately, the beginner will have to struggle with the wine dealer to get Calitornia wine, and this brings us to the crucial subject. Getting one's way at the wine shop.

There are in France huge underground factories which make a drink compounded of banana skins, random acids, brown sugar and broken shoe strings. Dved red and bottled, this is shipped to gullible American wine dealers, who sell it as "French country wine. Merchants with crates of it threatening to eat their way through the cellar floor stalk wine shops on the lookout for innocents, who are always recognizable by the dismay on their faces as they gaze at the price of German wine or wrestle with the distinction between a "Cote de Beaune ("side of bone") and Cotes-du-Rhône ("sides of Rona Barrett"). When the merchant pounces. offering his presistible bargain in rare French country wine, do not blanch, tremble, yield or buy, Tell him firmly, "Get me a jug of American wine and a half-dozen French empties." It should come to no more than about $4 and, best of all, it will be made from

Andrews Sisters: It Took 35 Years To Cross a Street

By John S. Wilson

NEW YORK, April 28 (NYT).—It has taken the Andrews Sisters more than 35 years to get across West 44th Streetfrom the stage door of the Paramount Theater, which was on the south side of the block between Seventh and Eighth Avenues when the sisters packed the house five or six times a day in the late thirties singing "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen," "Hold Tight" and "The Beer Barrel Polks." to the stage door of the Shubert Theater on the North side of the same block where they are now packing the house eight times a week in the new musical memento of World War II, "Over Here."

After making 900 records that have sold over 75 million copies, after 22 movies, innumerable appearances on radio, TV and in theaters and night clubs, and after being reduced from a trio to a duo by the death of their oldest sister. LaVerne, in 1967, the Andrews Sisters-Maxene and Patty-are finally in their first Broadway musical.

"A Broadway Show's been on our minds for 30 years," says Maxene, who used to be known as "the one in the middle." "But nobody was interested. This Broadway is very snobbish and cliquish. They separate Broadway from vaudeville and records, which was what we were associated with." Maxene, at 57, has the tanned, outdoor complexion of a golfer and gardener. In her

ment, she is struggling to keep two azalea plants alive despite the heat ("I mother them. I talk to them"). Patty, the youngest and blondest of the sisters, is 54 and has a cold which is the remnant of the flu she caught when she arrived in New York from California in December to start rehearsals of "Over

uncomfortably over-heated midtown apart-

"All our careers, it's always been a struggle" Patty declared, "When radio was big, it was difficult for us to get our own show because they couldn't visualize three girls doing it. In pictures what do you do with three girls? They had us talking in unison." "And we're still doing it in our big Broadway show," moaned Maxene. 'We're not glued together!" Patty exclaimed, "When our fans used to see one of us, they'd always ask, 'Where are your sisters?' Every time we got an award it was just one award for the three of us."

We have individual personalities that we've never been given a chance to exploit," Maxene said. "When we started rehearsing 'Over Here,' Tom Mooren, the director, was surprised at the way I read my lines. 'You don't sound like Patty,' he said. 'I'm not Patty!' I told him."

"Over Here" was developed from a musical called "Victory Canteen" that was tried out in Los Angeles three years ago. Patty Andrews, who had been doing a single in night clubs and on TV talk shows since 1969, was starred in it. Patty was on her own because Maxene had left show business "You couldn't get me out of show business with a crowbar," snorted Patty) to become dean of women at Tahoe Paradise College in Take Tahne.

I laughed when I was offered the position," Maxene said, "All my life I've been in show business. My schooling was the school of experience. But I had great rapport with young students. I taught basic speech and drama, not doing things from books but out of my head.

"Later I was made vice-president with five departments under me. Parents who remembered the Andrews Sisters found ex-cuses to come to talk to me. But the kids were not aware of who I was. I had to earn my respect with them."

But Tahoe Paradise College Went broke and closed in 1971 when the wealthy real estate man who had financed it died. Maxene went back to Los Angeles to find that "Victory Canteen" had been bought for Broadway production by Kenneth Waissman and Maxine Fox, producers of "Grease," who decided to have the entire show rewritten. As the new concept developed, the idea of the Andrews Sisters instead of only Patty Andrews became a key element.

"I hadn't thought of the show for me." said Maxene. "I was trying to get marigolds to grow, playing golf, lazing around. I was into a thoroughly easy life where your muscles get out of condition and you get fat, I was very happy."

She was lured out of this self-satisfied situation by a carefully baited offer. The Andrews Sisters had been in movies, radio, TV, records. What else is there to do? Answer (the bait): Broadway. "Resides" Maxene rationalized "the Andrews Sisters were a natural for the show. If a guy is going to write about the forties you can only find four or five names that really represent the forties."

"We were such a part of everybody's life in the second world war." Patty emphasized. "We represented something overseas and at home—a sort of security."

This feeling is reflected in the change that has taken place in their fan mail. Once it consisted largely of requests for auto-graphs and photographs. "But now," Maxene says, "they take time to write us and tell us how much we mean to their livesthey write four-page letters about incidents they remember."

Those who assume that the sisters do everything in unison would be surprised to find the opposite directions in which they move in private. Patty has been happily married for 32 years to Walter Wechsler, the sisters' pianist and conductor. They have no children, but Maxene, who has been happily divorced for 23 years (and intends to stay happily unmarried, has a son "who skis 24 hours a day," according to his mother, and a daughter who is an artist and lives with her husband in Santa Monica.

Patty and her busband sold the house in California they had lived in for 22 years just before they came to New York for "Over Here." Maxene, on the other hand. bought a house just before she came East, finally giving in to her daughter's urging to "stop living a Gypsy life." But neither one has given any thought to going back to California.

This is a breeze!" said Maxene of "Over Here," "Only eight shows a week! We used to do seven shows a day."

PEOPLE: For Princess's Visit

Kentucky-Police Prep

In preparation for the visit next week of Princess Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowdon, city and county policemen in Lexington Ky., are being given a crash course in protocol. Police liaison officer Joe Catt said that police on guard duty with the royal couple will wear tuxedos at all times and they're being taught when to stand, when to be scated, and how to act." He's making sure. Catt said, that at no time, before the regal visitors leave Lexington for the Kentucky Derby in Louisville on May 4, will a police officer say to Princess Margaret, "How vs doin' Maggie."

Capt. Mark Phillips won the Bedminton, England, horse trials for the third time in four years Saturday, and his wife, Princess Anne, finished fourth. The couple earned £1,300 for the royal purse (£1,000 for Phillips's first place and £300 for the princess's fourth) since Queen Elizabeth owned the horses (Columbus for Phillips, Goodwill for the prin-cess) that they rode. The couple now seems certain to be included in the British team which will compete in world championships in September.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R.-Ark., has asked voters not to take out anger at President Nixon by voting against Republicans—uncluding himself—running this year. Nearly 13 years after the death of Gary Cooper, his body has gone to its final resting placeunder a three-ton boulder at Southampton, Long Island, N.Y. Cooper's body was moved from a Los Angeles cemetery and re-buried in Southampton Frida-The boulder was moved atop his grave. "He always loved South. ampton, so we thought this way where he should be," his widor Veronica, now Mrs. John Con. verse, said. "He loved nature, she added. Trees are not half as permanent as rocks."

Mrs. Spiro Agnew has been hospitalized for routing tests in it. Towson, Md. a spokesman io: the hospital said. "Mrs. Agnercame as a private citizen, and we're keeping the whole thing on a private basis, the way slie wants it," the spokesman said

Brian Brown, of Wolverhams ton, England, likes boxing. That why he named his daughter Maria Sullivan Corbett Fitzsim mons Jeffries Hart Burns John son Willard Dempsey Tunne Schmeling Sharkey Carnera Bar Braddock Louis Charles Walrot Marciano Patterson Johanss Liston Clay Frazicr Forema Brown, Naturally, Maria, betwo months old, has made the Guinness Book of Records was a new U.K. record and tying tix world record for the longes name. But that was not the reason Brown gave his daughter
